L.A. Zine Fest 2015 is Sunday, February 15

11 am – 5 pm at 3347 N. San Fernando Rd., Los Angeles CA 90065

L.A. Zine Fest is organized by a collective of zine-enthusiasts dedicated to promoting zine culture as a means to connect the pre-existing communities in L.A.—artistic or otherwise. We aim to create opportunities for people to share self-published works and host events that encourage ideas to spill out onto paper in pictures and words. We believe that by embracing the urge to create and sharing ideas there can be a more robust and formidable local zine community that extends beyond bookstores and bedrooms. L.A. Zine Fest is an opportunity for Southern California's zinesters to come together in one place to meet and exchange ideas with those from all over the country.

The inaugural year of L.A. Zine Fest featured over 100 exhibitors selling their zines and comics, and over 1,500 attendees. With workshops on topics such as how to run your own DIY music venue, and keynote speakers Henry Rollins and V. Vale, L.A. Zine Fest 2012 established itself as the event for zinesters, comix fans, and DIY enthusiasts alike, and we hope to keep bringing great gatherings to Los Angeles for years to come.

On February 15, 2015, 200 exhibitors of zines and small press publications and thousands of visitors will gather at the Homenetmen Center for the fourth annual, free, all-ages, open-to-the-public L.A. Zine Fest.

<http://lazinefest.com/about/>

I look forward to this event all year, and to have it so close is too wonderful for words. Please, everyone go on Sunday so they'll keep this event in NELA! And thanks! Or just go to see what the inside of the Homenetmen Center looks like. It's right next to the Police Station; I've been driving by it for years -- this must be the year to go inside.
